

BOSTON 2024 PARTNERSHIP

Q1 2015 Progress Report

Today we are issuing our first Boston 2024 Partnership Quarterly Progress Report, which provides an update on our bid operations, finances and planning. There is important information to share, but first, on behalf of the entire team at Boston 2024, let me thank you for your ongoing support and contributions to this effort. Since becoming Chairman in May, I have been humbled and energized by the confidence you've placed in us.

I am grateful to my predecessor, John Fish, for his leadership. We have made great progress so far, starting with our selection by the U.S. Olympic Committee in January. Since the inception of our organization, we have raised $14 million (cash and value-in-kind). This is one of the strongest fundraising starts ever for a bid city and shows the deep support for bringing the 2024 Olympic and Paralympic Games to Boston. On April 22, we announced our diverse group of Board directors, and subsequently broadened the Board on May 21. It includes accomplished leaders and experts from education, nonprofits, business, law, labor, philanthropy, professional sports, the Olympic and Paralympic movement and our community.

Last week, I joined the senior leadership team in Lausanne, Switzerland, where we spent a day with the staff of the International Olympic Committee learning about the bidding process. Our meetings were both informative and heartening. The IOC is strongly committed to Olympic Agenda 2020, and responded favorably when we shared an overview of our strategy and emphasized our priorities around transparency and developing a fiscally-responsible, privately funded operating plan. Through the prism of Olympic Agenda 2020, the IOC was clear on our ability to be flexible with our planning, encouraging us to view sustainability and legacy as the driving factors of our venue decisions. In doing so, we identified further areas to reduce costs, increase revenue and maintain the special quality of the athlete and spectator experience – wins across the board.

Our other takeaway from our visit to the IOC is that we still have much to learn and absorb in this process. Our colleagues at the IOC were incredibly supportive and reminded us to slow down, learn from past bid and host cities, and focus on taking a collaborative approach to each step in the bid process. In sharing their own experiences working with bid cities, they stressed the importance of community engagement, and we continue to take this to heart. We will be working even more closely with our neighbors and key stakeholders throughout the city and the state to keep everyone actively engaged in the multi-faceted planning process.

And that's what we are focused on today – developing a plan that will create long-term benefits for Boston and for the Olympic and Paralympic movements. As we align our bid with the reforms of Olympic Agenda 2020 and Mayor Walsh's vision for Boston in 2030, I think you'll agree that this is indeed a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity for Boston to host the Olympic and Paralympic Games – and to do so in ways that are transformative for Boston. That means helping to advance the city's top priorities for affordable housing, job creation, education, technology, green space and transportation. Boston 2024 can truly act on the Olympic value of sport in service of humanity.

Our job now is to develop a fact-based, objective plan that maximizes all of these rewards while minimizing risks, and to clearly communicate this plan to the public. Even if we don't succeed in winning the 2024 Games, I believe this effort will help enhance the city as part of the Mayor's 2030 plan for Boston. Ultimately, our collective efforts will result in benefits for which we can all be proud.

As we move forward, we remain committed to an open, objective and inclusive process. This quarterly progress report reflects that commitment, and we hope it will set a new standard consistent with the values of the Olympic Agenda 2020 reforms while ensuring the competitiveness of our bid. In the pages that follow, we detail our sources and uses of funding for the Boston 2024 Partnership. We appreciate the cooperation from the offices of Mayor Walsh and Massachusetts Attorney General Maura Healey, both of whom worked with us to develop the disclosure protocols for our quarterly progress reports. In adopting this expanded set of disclosures, the Boston 2024 Partnership is managing its operations in a transparent way that far exceeds regulatory requirements and standards of other non-profit organizations. And that's appropriate. For our mission to be successful, we need to continue to earn the confidence and trust of our neighbors in Boston and throughout the Commonwealth.

Thank you again for joining us on this once-in-a-lifetime journey. We are confident that together our futures will be united as we deliver a compelling proposition to bring the Games back to the U.S., right here in Boston.

STEPHEN PAGLIUCA,
Chairman, Boston 2024 Partnership

Q1 2015 HIGHLIGHTS

Boston's selection by the United States Olympic Committee on January 8 began a process that will unfold between now and the summer of 2017, when the International Olympic Committee meets in Lima, Peru, to select a host city for the 2024 Olympic and Paralympic Games. Among our accomplishments in the first quarter, we:

Began the process of collaborating with all key stakeholders for venue planning, including local communities, elected officials, athletes, national and international governing bodies for several sports and many other relevant parties. This information is helping us shift from the proof of concept we shared with the U.S. Olympic Committee to developing the next phase Games Concept by June 30.

Conducted six of 20 planned statewide community meetings and three of nine community meetings in the City of Boston. (See page 17 for future meeting dates.)

Galvanized support from local Olympians and Paralympians who raised their hands to actively participate in the bid process. New England is home to more than 400 Olympians and Paralympians.

Signed up over 1,100 volunteers who are in their communities every day building support for hosting the Games, participating in more than 100 events in the first 100 days. As of May 31st, total volunteers grew to 3,000.

Expanded our staff, a small team of people who share a deep belief in our broader purpose and who are working tirelessly to translate this passion into positive actions.

Established a strong executive leadership team, led by Rich Davey as CEO and supported by a broad and deep set of advisory committees. We're fortunate to have several local professionals participate in these committees, bringing us insightful ideas and thoughtful plans.

Recruited the best Olympic experts to help guide key elements of the bid process so we are competitively positioned to win in this most international of all campaigns.

Q1 2015 FINANCIAL REVIEW

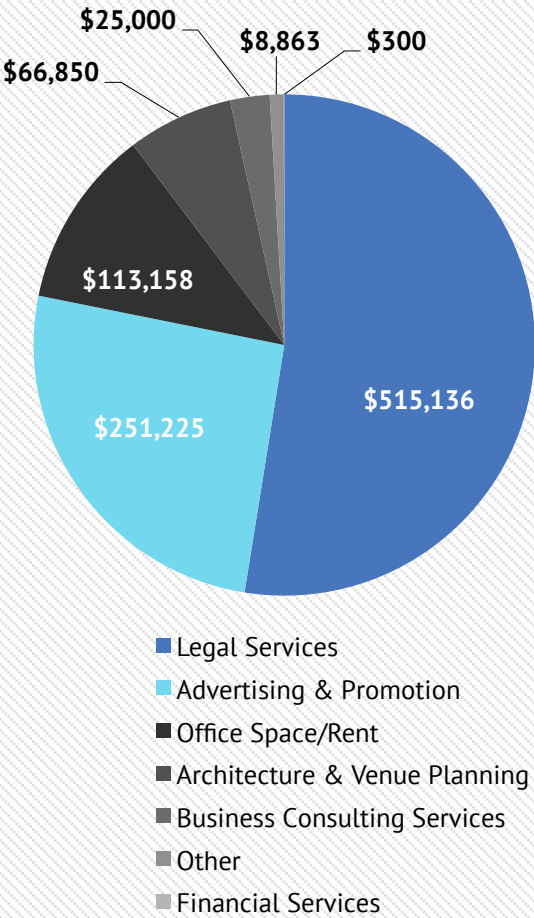

SUPPORT

The Boston 2024 Partnership receives no government funding. It relies on support from private donors (individuals, corporations and foundations) in the form of cash or stock contributions, pledges and gifts in kind. The “Contributions” chart shows the cash and stock support by donor type but does not include gifts in kind. The “Gifts in Kind” chart shows the breakdown of gifts in kind by type. Contributions of assets other than cash are reported at their estimated value.

EXPENSES

As required by the FASB Accounting Standards Codification™, Boston 2024 allocates its expenses on a functional basis among its program and support services. Expenses that can be identified with a specific program and support service are allocated directly according to their natural expense classification. Expenses that can be identified with more than one program and support service, such as employee costs, are allocated based on time spent or space used to support those functions. The chart below shows expenses allocated on this functional basis and excludes gifts in kind.

Subsequent to March 31, 2015, the Boston 2024 Partnership engaged with Interpublic Group for marketing and communications services at an annualized projected spend of $1.3 million, which includes services from Weber Shandwick and Octagon. In addition, consulting contracts were signed in April 2015 with Teneo Sports, which specializes in bid presentation services, and JTA, a global sports communications agency. Both companies required non-disclosure agreements as a condition of their engagement. The annualized projected spend with Teneo is expected to be in the range of $1,000,000 - $1,250,000. For JTA, annualized projected spend is expected to be in the range of $250,000 - $500,000.

Pursuant to the Bid City Agreement, Boston 2024 reimburses the cost and expenses of certain USOC staff subject to a cap of $3,000,000 over the multi-year term of the agreement.
